

Drama teacher Jeanne Hardie teaches teamwork, problem solving, critical thinking, time management—"all very valuable tools for success in college and throughout life," she says. "I hope that all my students will see that theatre can entertain, educate and move an audience to tears or laughter—or both in the same piece if you're lucky—in a way that no other art form can quite duplicate."

Here's what some of Jeanne's students thought of their recent performance of Neil Simon's The Good Doctor at Saint George's Founders Theater.

"Being the narrator came easily to me; it was developing a character that I could interpret, at least more than when I was in a structured scene. The Good Doctor was a terrific show, the perfect mix of slapstick, dry humor and wit, with some parts that were just charming."

- Wyatt Orme

"The intense collaboration and teamwork, combined with the sheer thrill of performing, make theatre one of the most rewarding things I have ever done. Despite the stress and late nights, I'm always sad when a show is over!"

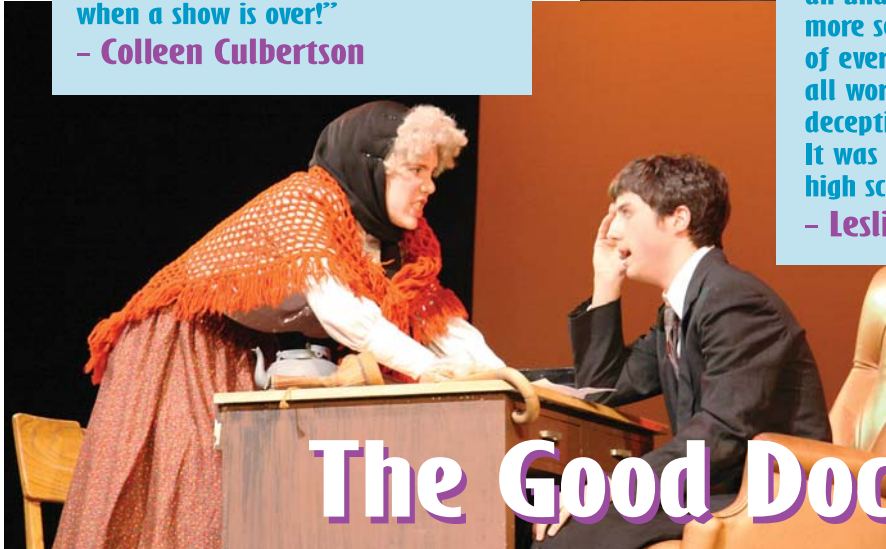

- Colleen Culbertson

"I felt like we were all really stretched in our acting ability, playing parts with humor on the surface and an undercurrent of things more serious. I'm really proud of everyone in the class, we all worked really hard on a deceptively demanding piece. It was a perfect play to cap off high school drama for me."

- Leslie Cohen

On the Web

View videos from other SGS theatre productions at www.sgs.org/discover

The Good Doctor

"This was a different sort of experience, because we each had to play several different well-developed characters. I think Molly will agree that our lines in The Quiet War scene were second nature to us, and it turned out to be one of the better scenes of the show. It was a very difficult show, but we pulled it off and had a lot of fun doing so."

- Cor Dehle/Jones

"The Good Doctor felt so different from regular high school shows—dark, witty and smart. The Quiet War scene was really fun. Cor and I argue a lot in real life, so we have great sparring chemistry."

- Molly Ostheller